

UI research gets $117,093 grant

Rep. Dave Loebsack, D-Iowa, announced Tuesday that the Department of Education awarded the University of Iowa a grant totaling $117,093. This funding will go to the Iowa Center for Assistive Technology Education and Research, which aims to improve the university experience for students with disabilities.

The grant will fund the development of comprehensive training materials and professional development courses designed for postsecondary educators and administrators to address the national needs of students with disabilities attending institutions of higher education.